Nadia Nadim's Escape to Victory. Part 1

Nadia Nadim came to Denmark at the age of twelve. She was a refugee from Afghanistan. Six months earlier, her father had been brutally killed by a terrorist group called the Taliban back home. After the Taliban took control in Afghanistan, they introduced strict new laws. Sports were forbidden. Girls were not allowed to go to school. Women had to wear burkas outside the home. Men had to grow beards. Life was hard for everyone. With their father gone, life became extremely difficult for Nadia's mother and sisters. Afghanistan was not a safe place for a family of women.

Nadia Nadim's Escape to Victory. Part 2

Nadia's mother decided to take her five daughters and start a new life in England, where they could be free from fear. She made an escape plan. The family used fake passports to get to Italy. Once there, they hid behind containers in a lorry heading for England. Perhaps the driver got nervous, because he told the family to get off in Denmark. That is how the family ended up in a Danish refugee camp.
